Mumbai Mumbai is India's commercial and financial capital. It is the fifth largest city in the world and India's largest and richest metropolitan area. Mumbai is synonymous with Bollywood, a multi-billion dollar film industry that is perhaps the country's best known cultural export, as well as being home to the country's vibrant financial services and capital markets. Almost all of Indian and foreign financial services firms are headquartered here, as are India's major regulators, the Reserve Bank of India (RBI), and the Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI).

Bangalore Bangalore is the principal administrative, cultural, commercial and industrial center of the Indian state of Karnataka. Bangalore is now home to more than 2,000 high-tech companies, including domestic giants like Wipro and Infosys Technologies. Bangalore has become the 'Silicon Valley' of India.

New Delhi New Delhi is India's capital city and the most prosperous of India's 28 states. It is also the center for trade, commerce and industry in the northern region. The growth of service industries and the presence of a large, highly skilled English-speaking workforce in New Delhi have attracted many multinational companies. New Delhi's manufacturing industry has also grown remarkably. The city's rich consumer market, coupled with advanced physical infrastructure and a high rate of urbanization, forms its foreign investment strength.
